

In reviewing each paper, please try to answer the following questions:

1. What teaching and learning issue does this study attempt to address?
2. How does it go about it?
3. Does the study speak to any theory of teaching and learning and/or does it summarise previous relevant research in the field?
4. Are the research methods appropriate and convincing? What other approaches might have been used?
5. What do you conclude from the study? Do you find the authors' interpretations and conclusions plausible?
6. Does the study suggest further research questions for investigation: if so, what are they?
7. On the whole, do you find that this study adds anything useful to our understanding of teaching and learning in higher education. If so, how would you summarise its contribution? If not, how would you have gone about things differently?
